Home & School Hear Regional Director

The Coleman Home and School Association held its last meeting of the season Monday night May 27 at which time Mrs. Jane Barnes, Regional Director of Home and School Associations for Southern Alberta, was present and gave an interesting talk.

Mrs. Barnes gave a report on the Home and School Associations' convention held in Edmonton in April and then gave a talk on the different methods of preparing and planning programs for local Home and School Associations.

Election of officers was then held and the new slate for the coming year comprises:

President, Helen Nedd; vice-president, Lorraine Aiello; secretary Irene Covey; treasurer, Mrs. A. Storcer, and corresponding secretary, Alice Montabetti.

Various work committees will be formed when meetings resume in the fall.

Program for the evening comprised a spelling bee between Mrs. Mary Atkinson's two grade eight groups, with group 'A' comprising Mark Ondrus, Lenore Bjarnason, Mary Ellen Kolena and Arlene Krywolt, winning out over George Zambroski, Connie Ferschweiler, Mary Anne Zak and Peter Truch.

Attendance prize for the meeting was awarded to Mrs. Atkinson's grade eight class. The meeting concluded after lunch was served.

BOOK REVIEW

The Romantic Crows Nest Pass.
Frontier Book No. 5, 48 pp., photographs and maps; price 75 cents.

Mining, fire, explosion and landslide have made Highway No. 3, between Cranbrook and Fort Macleod the most historic and disaster-ridden stretch of highway in North America.

The modern travellers who stop to read some historical sign can do little but read the words, look hopefully around and then return to their car to wonder about the story behind the sign. Even native Crows Nesters sometimes wonder about the real story behind the legends of their beautiful Pass.

This Frontier Guide to the "Romantic Crows Nest Pass" tells those stories in a rare composite of travelogue and history.

The rugged days of Wild Horse and Fort Steele; the pandemonium of the tragic Fernie fires; the Hillcrest Mine Disaster, which still ranks as Canada's most terrible mining catastrophe, as well as many other highlights of the past 100 years, have been carefully researched, illustrated with numerous rare photographs, and set with three guide maps.

This little booklet makes a rare travelling companion. Available in Coleman at the Coleman Journal and the Rexall Drug Store.

An estimated 160,000 visitors have toured the GM of Canada South Plant passenger car assembly lines at Oshawa in the past nine years. A walking tour would take days to complete so visitors travel by motorized "train".

"Pat" Sullivan Laid To Rest

Eugene Mark "Pat" Sullivan of Coleman, died in the Crows Nest Pass Municipal Hospital on May 21st, 1963.

Mr. Sullivan, well known in the Pass, was 72 years of age, and was born in Minot, North Dakota, U.S.A., on August 1st, 1892. He came to Canada in 1911, settling in Pincher Creek where he farmed until 1942, when he came to Coleman, where he gained employment at the International Mine.

He worked at this occupation for five years and in 1947 went into the car selling business and worked for a number of garages in the Pass as a salesman. He was of the Catholic faith.

Surviving are his wife Pauline Louise of Coleman; one daughter, Mrs. Alois (Jean) Kubica of Coleman; one son, Larry, serving with the Royal Canadian Navy in Victoria, and three grandchildren.

Prayers were said at Fantin's Hillside Chapel in Coleman at 7:30 p.m. Friday. Requiem High Mass was celebrated from the Holy Ghost Catholic Church at 10:00 a.m. on Saturday, and interment followed in the family plot in the Catholic cemetery. The Rev. Dennis Fleming officiated at the services. Fantin's Hillside Chapel were in charge of arrangements.

The late Mr. D'Amico was born in Italy. He lived in Nordegg, Alberta, working in the mines until the early 1940's when he moved to the Pass. He was predeceased by a son, Rudolph, in Nordegg, in 1941.

He is survived by his wife, Celene, in Coleman.

Millions Mourn Death of Beloved Pope John XXIII

Countless millions around the world mourned Pope John XXIII as the cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church began preparations to pick his successor.

The 81 year old spiritual ruler of 500,000,000 Catholics died Monday night after four days of agonizing suffering from stomach tumor and peritonitis.

His message to the Vatican said Pope John's "fruitful activities for the maintenance and strengthening of peace have earned him wide recognition and won him the respect of peace-loving people."

Residents of The Crowsnest Pass joined the many millions in mourning his death.

West Coleman Residents Riled Up on Dust Problem

Charging that Coleman Council would do nothing for them and that a Chinook Health Unit Officer had been told to "Lay Off" his investigations on the water situation in West Coleman, some fifty West Coleman residents gathered in the Cameron School Wednesday evening of last week to discuss the action they are to take to eliminate the two problems that are facing them — clouds of coal dust that are infiltrating their homes and school and flooding basements that are caused they claim by flooding an abandoned coal mine.

Letters that have been sent to various bodies including town council, the minister of agriculture, the local MLA William Kovach, the minister of Public Health were read to the meeting by Steve Ondrus, a resident of the area. Since no definite action to curtail the problems has as yet been taken eighty one of the districts approximate 120 ratepayers signed court of revision notices and appeared before the court recently. The court headed by members of the council and two town assessors heard the residents complain that their assessments were too high as their properties were greatly devaluated by the dust and water problems. Residents did not receive satisfaction at the court of revision and are now signing slips to the Alberta Assessment commission against the decision given by the court of revision with respect to the properties owned by the West Coleman residents.

Residents are claiming that their homes are being filled with a greasy type coal dust problem has arisen since the coal company installed dryers last year. A minor dust problem was faced prior to the installation of the dryers but not comparable to present condition. Women have to have two changes of clothes daily for the young children attending Coleman Cameron School and it is reported that due to the dust condition that windows in the school cannot be opened and heat is terrific in the building. Children it is said come home from school looking like miners after a day in the pits. Homeowners cannot paint or clean up their homes as the dust is so thick in the air that it is useless to try and clean up.

With regard to the water problem residents claim that this condition has worsened in the last year as prior to the mine being flooded that water in the basements was endured for from four to six weeks during the spring time when the Crows Nest River was high from spring thaw but now the water condition has been evident for six months. The water rusty in color is also contaminated with oil. The water has formed large pools on the surface of the road and with many outhouses and septic tanks being used in the area the water basins are a natural breeding place for flies, mosquitoes and other insects which residents feel will eventually create an epidemic. This water contaminated with unsanitary materials seeps into basements and besides a foul smell residents here cannot enjoy the use of their basements and cannot have gas furnaces installed. A Chinook Health Unit officer was checking this matter for action and according to one of the ratepayers at the meeting the officer was told to lay off. O. Mattson, inspector of schools, and Duncan Brown, mines inspector of Lethbridge visited Coleman Tuesday to look over the dust problem.

William Kovach M.L.A. was present at the meeting and speaking only in an advisory capacity reported that after he had been notified of the conditions had spoken to various government departments including the Water Resources branch, The department of agriculture and the Minister of Health and that action has been started and Minister of Health, J. D. Ross agreed that something must be done. Mr. Ross will advise Mr. Hogg, Chief Sanitary Engineer to investigate the Chinook Health officers being told to "lay off" and to find out who told them to lay off and why.

Mr. Kovach suggested that West Coleman residents put pressure on their council for action and that he would work with them.

With various government departments now aware of the situation and action being evident, ratepayers are waiting for further developments.

Old Time Resident Moves to Calgary

Mr. R.M. (Dick) Greenhalgh one of Coleman's old time residents for the past 52 years, left last week for Calgary, where his daughter Mrs. Emily Milton and two grandchildren now reside.

Mr. Greenhalgh has sold his home on Sixth Street.

Highly respected residents, Mr. and the late Mrs. Greenhalgh will be missed in the ranks of old friends here. We wish him contentment and good health in his new surroundings.

'Criminal Negligence' Charge Against Coleman Man

A 10-year-old Coleman youth, William Kinneer, is in good condition in the Crows Nest Pass Municipal Hospital after suffering a gunshot wound in the leg.

The mishap took place Thursday evening and is being investigated by the RCMP. No details of the accident have been released.

The boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kinneer of Coleman.

Ernest Bettinew of Coleman, appeared before Magistrate F. S. Radford of Blairmore on Friday afternoon, and was charged with Criminal Negligence causing bodily harm to William Kinneer, as the result of a shooting accident on Thursday afternoon.

Bettinew was released on $500 bail and was remanded to June 11.

Charges were laid by RCMP of the Blairmore detachment.

C.N.P. Bowlers Enjoy Annual Banquet

The Crows Nest Pass Bowling Club held its annual banquet and social evening at the Catholic hall in Coleman on Sunday evening June 2, which was attended by some 70 members and guests.

Following the banquet, president of the club, Gino Quarin, presented various awards and prizes to members of teams and winners of events.

The "Zero" team were the winners of the "A" event and Captain Marge Kubica was presented with the team trophy, after which the captain of the "Bushbats", Leo Tetreault, was presented with the "B" event trophy.

Marge Kubica and Tom Cunningham were called upon and each received trophies for being the winners of the High Single, High Three and High Average trophies. Arthur Juhlin was winner of the High Average for Spares award and Adele Panck took this honor in the ladies' section. Individual trophies were also awarded to members of the winning teams.

A program of entertainment was then enjoyed with each of the teams in the league being called upon to take part in short skits. An evening of dancing was then enjoyed with Spot, Bingo and other specialty dances being featured.

Coleman High School Annual Banquet, Prom on May 24

Coleman High School students enjoyed their annual banquet and prom on Friday evening, May 24.

The banquet supper, attended by some 200 parents and guests, was held in the Catholic hall, where, after Grace was said by Miss Elizabeth Liska, an enjoyable banquet was held.

A toast to the Queen was proposed by Joseph Aiello, after which the toast proposed to the Staff by Robert Franz, was responded to by Principal Horace Allen.

Anthony Sikora then offered a toast to the School Board, to which Chairman of the Board, Steve Mraz, ably responded. Harold Nelson responded to the toast to the parents, given by his daughter, Miss Donna Nelson, after which the Class Valetudinarian, James Montabetti, gave an inspiring talk.

A toast to the Graduating Class was then proposed by Mr. O. Mattson, and responded to by Malcolm MacQuarrie.

Thanks to the ladies of Coleman Order of the Royal Purple Lodge who catered to the banquet, was expressed by Ronald Fontana.

To make the annual event more enjoyable the grade ten and eleven Choir, directed by Mrs. B. Bond, sang several entertaining selections, followed by a skit "Little Bo Peep In Trouble Again" by Joan Mraz and Randy Fabro.

A duet was then presented by Ralphina Deluca and Ken Murdoch after which a monologue "Inflationary Language" was given by Joany Aiello.

The Graduating Class was then introduced after which all retired to the school auditorium where a dance was enjoyed. For the occasion the students had gaily decorated the auditorium in an Oriental design.

On an average day the General Motors plant at Oshawa produces 150 highway transports and 45 railway cars representing 1,000,000 pounds of materials for building cars and trucks.

At 60 miles an hour, with good brakes and dry pavement, it is difficult to stop, allowing for reaction time, in much less than the length of a football field.

Not by bread alone . . .

Little Yuen Fong, 10, has lived with her family all her life on this pitiful, crowded boat in the Hong Kong area. This is the fate of thousands, some of whom actually never set foot on dry land. Now there is a ray of hope that bright, intelligent Yuen Fong will get the education that will permit her to escape this life when she is grown, for she is one of 12 children in the Far East and Europe who have been financially "adopted" through Foster Parents' Plan, Montreal, by hundreds of citizens of Kingston, Ontario, who contribute to their support through the CKWS Happy Show Club. Recently it became known that Yuen Fong longed to play the organ in a crude chapel on a nearby boat and the Kingston people were quick to raise extra money needed to give her regular lessons. You too, as an individual or as a member of a group, can help to fulfill the physical and emotional needs of a child overseas, and correspond with them regularly. A unique display of Alberta-made products will be on tour this year at Alberta fairs and exhibitions. The display, contained in the attractively painted, custom-built trailer shown in the photograph above, consists of double folding cabinets. Mounted in the cabinets are samples of products and materials which are manufactured in the province. The trailer, measuring 26 feet long and 9 feet high, was also "made in Alberta".

Both sides of the trailer open completely to form a canopy-covered walkway and the cabinets inside are so arranged that viewers may walk through the trailer for closer examination. Fluorescent fixtures in the ceiling provide adequate lighting. No building space is necessary — merely access to a power supply in the grounds.

The "Alberta showcase" is part of the Alberta government "Buy Alberta" program. Arrangements for the appearance of the trailer and displays at fairs and exhibitions of two days' duration or longer, may be made without charge by writing to the Director of Publicity, Department of Industry and Development, 245 Highways Building, Edmonton, and availability will be on a first come, first serve basis.

The Right View To Live

A resolution calling for the section of the Criminal Code to be revised so as to permit the admission as evidence in court of a scientific test to establish blood alcohol content was passed at the Canadian Highway Safety Council at the final session of the three-day annual meeting.

Objection to this resolution was raised by Edmonton lawyer Chas. H. Grant on the grounds that it would be contrary to the Canadian Bill of Rights.

The right to drive a motor vehicle on our highways is not a right to all citizens. It cannot be classed as a human right. It is a privilege conferred by the province on those drivers who are competent to pass the drivers' tests set by the Department of Highways. Drivers are licensed to operate a motor vehicle when they are judged to have attained a standard of proficiency. Then they are granted their operator's license. When a driver through impairment by alcohol, falls below this standard of proficiency his license to drive should be suspended in the interests of public safety.

The primary human right is the right to live. This right is woven into the fabric of our legal and social structure. Impaired driving impinges on this primary human right. Hon. Gordon Taylor, Minister of Highways, stated at a previous Canadian Highway Safety Conference that alcohol was involved in 40 per cent of all fatal highway accidents across Canada.

The Canadian Highway Safety Council is to be commended for passing a resolution calling for a change in the Criminal Code to permit an "implied consent" clause in drivers' licenses for a scientific test to establish blood alcohol content. Such evidence could be admitted in court and drivers guilty of impaired driving should have their operator's license suspended.

Impaired motorists have certain human rights but one should not be to operate a motor vehicle on the highways. The rest of us have human rights, too, and one of them is the right to live.

Steam Power Plant Will Consume Half Province's Coal

When Calgary Power finishes its modifications and new construction at the Wabamun generating plant it will be burning nearly half the total amount of coal mined in Alberta.

Sometime this year the company will convert one of the two 88,000 h.p. generators at Wabamun into a coal-fired unit burning a million tons of coal a year.

The company's requirements in 1963 will be generated, 30 per cent from hydro and 70 per cent from steam. The cost of energy produced at the Wabamun Steam Generating Station is expected to be the lowest from any source in the company's history and in spite of continuing inflation, rate reductions of a million and a half dollars a year are planned to go into effect this year.

Already the follow-on rates for farms have been reduced by half a cent per kilowatt hour and similar reductions are in progress for other domestic and commercial consumers.

In its annual report the company suggested several alternative future energy sources that can be developed.

1. The Athabasca River Project.
2. Extension of the Wabamun Plant using coal from farther afield.
3. The construction of a new steam plant elsewhere in the province.
4. Electricity from the Athabasca Tar Sands area.
5. Nuclear power although it is felt unlikely that such energy will be competitive due to the availability of low cost fuels in Alberta.

The opening up of the Athabasca Tar Sands and the delivery of the oil products by pipe line to Eastern Canada could offer an alternative for stabilizing the cost of energy there.

As far as Alberta is concerned, the "national grid" has little to offer, for at least the next few years, that could not be covered adequately by more modest interconnections with adjoining provinces to be arranged bilaterally as the loads grow.

Canada Lynx Protected

Canada Lynx are appearing again in fringe areas of cities, towns and villages at several points in Alberta. A fairly common occurrence during the past two years in particular, this seemingly unnatural behavior by a notoriously timid wild animal does not represent any serious threat to people and assuredly is not worth the fuss that it created in some regions during 1962.

Lynx populations increased a few years ago in response to a dramatic increase in the numbers of rabbits, the favored lynx food. Traditionally, rabbits virtually disappear following their reproduction explosion and this has just recently happened again.

The reduction in rabbits leaves a number of unfed lynx whose hunger drives them to seek out strange places for sustenance, typically the farmer's hen roost, sheep pen or the haunts of birds and small mammals. In early spring numbers of all wild birds and game are at lowest ebb therefore, lynx and other carnivores, if they are to remain alive, must travel extensively in search of food. For this reason normally furtive habits are shed and lynx are readily seen in daylight hours, hunting without regard for danger in precincts usually shunned by such shy creatures.

The government of Alberta is required by law to protect lynx, a fur-bearing specimen. The government however appreciates that cases may arise where it is necessary for the farmer to protect his poultry. To this end Fish and Wildlife officers are prepared, indeed willing, to dispose of lynx or other wild animals discovered beyond reasonably habitual wildlife premises. While any person might be expected to act on his own behalf to dispatch a lynx found in the farm chicken coop, he may not be excused for hunting and killing specimens of a protected animal simply because it happens to cross his path.

The relentless pursuit, touched off by the appearance of some lynx in areas of human habitation during 1962 was nothing more than a shameful exhibition of human ignorance.

Whether or not government officers attempt to restrict similar actions by prosecuting offenders, has little bearing on the distaste with which such flagrant destruction is viewed by less arrogant neighbors.

The lynx is a splendid specimen of the wildlife realm to which Albertans and others pay an almost religious lip service at times.

Words like "conservation", "protection", "wilderness preservation" and "outdoor opportunity" fall righteously from citizen tongues. Why permit completely unfounded fear and frenzy to supplant this dedication with wrathful stupidity?

Any citizen who seriously believes that a lynx or other wild animal presents a real threat to his belongings should contact the nearest fish and wildlife officer at once. Every person is right who defends his property if it is under attack but no one is privileged to slaughter protected wildlife on the basis of assumption.

The lynx is not a fearsome marauder as fiction sometimes describes it. Any 25 pound cat will fight if cornered and so will any other creature, large or small.

Give it a chance of go its own way, and no matter how tempted, resist the urge to give chase — Killing is in violation of the law and the ancient attitudes of "the posse" and "vengeance" should have been replaced with sophistication in Canada by now.

Canada's Yukon Is Not All Ice and Snow

FRANK LYNCH-STAUTON

In the forthcoming Provincial Election, the Progressive Conservative Organization and its candidate Frank Lynch-Staunton may set a precedent in Canadian politics. Canadian politics of late have subjected the public to a barrage of gimmicks, mudslinging and empty promises, the "means justified the end" to get a vote. Frank Lynch-Staunton is not a "politician" in the sense that the word has come to mean to the Canadian public. He will not be out "politicking" for votes by kissing babies in perambulators and promising every man in the street anything he may ask for. Frank will be out in full force to present the simple facts of putting efficient business management back into government. He has proven this capability, to all who have had the chance to meet him, in the operation of his own business affairs.

On the economic scene, the tourist potential must be "tapped." Every businessman in every town of the Crownsnest Pass and Pincher Creek stands to gain from this all-important industry. The only thing needed is a "healthy shot in the arm" of good public relations techniques and enthusiastic advertising.

Enthusiasm and vitality are sorely needed in all our governmental affairs. "Perennialism" has set in like a malignant growth, infiltrating every aspect of our government, and the administration of government has become nothing but a routine chore. What is needed is a man, who in plain simple words, "gets things done." And such a man is Frank Staunton. Facts bear this out. For, six years in all, Frank served on the Municipal Council. He has been on the Chinook Health Unit Board for four years, is currently serving on the Willow Creek Auxiliary Hospital Board, and is Alberta's representative on the Canada Council in Ottawa.

From all this we can see the diversity of this man's nature and experience. Agriculture is Frank's livelihood, and he is no stranger to the business world. He is also quite familiar with the ordinary man's problems, having experienced trying times as a young man.

While a portion of the outside world was experiencing one of the worst winters in years, Yukon's at Whitehorse were scratching their heads and wondering if the Yukon River was ever going to freeze over in time for the Annual Dog Team Races in March. It just happened to be one of those mild winters.

Located north of the 60th Parallel, Canada's Yukon and its good neighbor, the State of Alaska are recipients of well-meant but often ill-conceived sympathy from "outsiders" who have limited knowledge of the Last Frontiers. This year sympathy was flowing in the opposite direction. While Florida, Georgia and other southern States were shivering in freezing temperatures, Whitehorse and much of the Yukon was basking in spring-like 40 degree weather. While Great Britain, Europe and other parts of the world were digging out of the record-breaking snowfalls many Yukoners were enjoying a season of light precipitation.

Usually, Yukon communities are "snobbish" about their climate and, when necessary, they work on the theory that if you can't beat it — join it. Frequently they try to outdo experienced, both hot and cold. Mayo, Snag and Dawson people look down on Whitehorse as having "sissy weather" in the "Banana Belt".

Minus 81 Degrees

Since official records have been kept, the highest recorded temperature was 86 degrees at Mayo in 1951. The coldest temperature was minus 81 degrees at Snag in 1947. The capital city of Whitehorse enjoys a climate which is strongly influenced by the Pacific Ocean. Lying just 80 miles north of tide-water, weather patterns in the Gulf of Alaska spread rapidly into the Whitehorse area. Thawing temperatures have occurred in every winter month, with sudden plunging temperatures usually of short duration. Summer maximums of 80 degrees can be expected most years and the highest temperature recorded in the Whitehorse area is 91.1 degrees.

Increasing thousands of tourists who visit the Yukon each year are surprised and intrigued by the long hours of daylight in "The Land of the Midnight Sun". During the summer months, amused visitors experiment with writing post cards or reading newspapers at midnight without benefit of artificial light.

Following an autumn season of beautiful coloring, Yukoners prepare, once again, for a round of winter activities including curling and skiing. Life in the Yukon is not unlike that of many parts of North America. It is a land of Spring, Summer, Fall and Winter.

At times, Yukon weather has been likened to a woman; sometimes unpredictable, cantankerous and spiteful. And yet, just when Yukoners are willing to call off their love affair with their land, it will turn so beguilingly beautiful that they forgive anything.

Spruced-up home will sell better

The home owner who decides to buy another house wants a fair profit and a quick sale of his present house.

If he is impatient, he may buy the new house before selling the old one.

Then he will be financing two sets of mortgages and in panic may rush into a sale which gives him no profit, even a loss.

John Bruce, an official of a large

American building supply manufacturer, says the homeowner can do a great deal, and at no great expense to make his house more acceptable.

"People, especially homebuyers, seem to be suspicious by nature," he says "so it is worthwhile for a seller to correct minor deficiencies before putting his house on the market."

Inspect the exterior. If the paint is peeling or blistered, scrape it and touch it up. A suspicious prospect can see one bad area and base his whole impression on that.

One Out Of Ten

In Canada now only one person in ten lives on a farm. Project the picture one step further by saying that seven out of ten Canadians live in towns and cities today and you have pretty well suggested the extent to which a preponderantly rural, agricultural, countrified population has changed to an urban population.

To us this fact alone suggests that more and more the weight of influence of urban centres is going to be felt in the determination of trends and tendencies followed by the country as a whole. As centres of business and industry, of culture and education, of recreation and information, larger centres will continue to play increasingly important roles in directing our manners and tastes. As far as we can see the trend so clearly defined by the statistics quoted above is likely to continue well into the foreseeable future.

Having said so much we would like to turn to the thought we had in mind. Our pattern of government, representation, and thinking is often still determined by our background which is generally rural and agricultural. Facts as they now stand would seem to indicate that some of our leaders who are advocating a sharp review of government setups are far more than cranks. It now seems only reasonable that at least a survey of resources should be made, and a definition of appropriate levels of distribution. The federal government has one set of problems, provinces have another, cities another, smaller communities and rural municipalities still another. The respective influence of these different areas has changed and is continuing to change.

During the past ten years alone the cities and larger towns of Canada have attained a measure of importance that could not be imagined at the time of Confederation, or even a half century ago. Don't let there be any loose or creaking stairs or steps, they discourage a prospective buyer.

Ascertain the condition of the roof. Have any leaks repaired. If the roof is in poor condition, it is often worthwhile to resurface it with asphalt shingles.

Plumbing and heating systems should be inspected and in good order. Serious prospects sometimes bring experts with them to determine the soundness of these systems and a minor defect can be greatly exaggerated by a job-hungry contractor.

Have all vital facts and figures readily available. Know the age of the house, exact taxes, property boundaries, fuel costs, assessments and other pertinent information.

Colonial maintains popularity

The colonial style maintains its popularity with home buyers more consistently than any other. Bevel or bungalow siding — the colonial patterns — are still the biggest sellers.

Wood siding remains the standard of the building industry, and is the most economical also, in most cases.

The appeal of the traditional styles of home architecture are based on our desire to hark back to what we like to think of as "the good old days". We may drive a sleek, chromed and finished automobile, but many of us want to live in a home that looks like the one we and our fathers grew up in.

Gelatine-glazed ham for professional touch

When you serve a supper buffet-style it's always nice to have something eye-catching and a little bit different to attract the attention of your hungry guests.

We think you will agree that this gelatine-glazed ham, not too fussy to prepare and easy to serve, will please all concerned.

You will need sliced ham, either ready-cooked or baked at home. The gelatine glue is very similar to that prepared by professional chefs. They use it to dress up ham, poultry and other meats for the beautiful buffet displays which they prepare as proof of their talent and culinary ability.

Buffet Petal Ham—

For a small buffet to serve only a few people, invert a small platter (or shallow oval bowl) on a larger platter. Starting at one end of the small platter, place the large slices of ham down the centre up over the small platter to the other end, allowing slices to overlap. On sides, insert smaller slices of ham between upper slice to give petal effect, making sure to cover small platter.

For a large buffet where more meat is needed, reserve the best slices for outer layer and place remaining slices in piles on large platter, arranging them to resemble the shape of a ham, narrow and low at one end, wider and high at the other. Then arrange the best slices on top as directed for "small buffet" ham.

Cover with wax paper and chill in refrigerator for about one hour.

Transparent Glaze—
(double the recipe for large ham)
1 pkg. (1 tbsp.) unflavored gelatine

1/2 cup cold water
1 cup boiling water
1 tbspn. lemon juice
one-eighth tspn. salt

Soak gelatine and cold water in a small saucepan for five minutes. Add boiling water, lemon juice and salt and stir until gelatine is dissolved. Set pan in cold water, stirring occasionally, until mixture becomes syrupy. Carefully pour over chilled ham to form a thin glaze on entire surface. Remove any excess glaze from platter. Garnish and serve or keep in refrigerator until time to set up buffet table.

They Could Have Been Saved "IF"

In the past 10 years 623 Albertans have lost their lives through drowning. This is a tragic statistic... but even more tragic is the fact that most of these lives could easily have been saved IF the victims had known and followed even the basic rules of Water Safety.

THIS IS NATIONAL WATER SAFETY WEEK in Canada. A Week designated by the Canadian Red Cross Society to spotlight the increasing need for safety knowledge in a nation where water recreation has grown to be the Number One family pastime.

Results of numerous Red Cross studies on drowning fatalities reveal some startling and significant facts. They show that most drownings occur from unexpected falls into the water. They also show that all the victims were within a few feet from some sort of safety. AND even more surprising is the evidence that in almost all cases no call was made for help.

We can therefore assume that if the victims had learned how to protect themselves in the water they would have been prepared, at least partially, when they fell in and would not doubt have been able to survive until help arrived. The assumption continues that if they had learned how to "Tread Water" or other down-proofing techniques they could have stayed alive and rested sufficiently to over-come panic and get help from the point of safety. While almost everyone assumes that a person in trouble naturally calls for help... this is not the case for several reasons.

First, the person may be in a state of panic. Second, he may not be aware of the seriousness of the situation. Third... and this has been proven in many cases... he may be too embarrassed to call for help or not know how.

Red Cross conducted a personal survival experiment and found that a great deal of effort is required to overcome embarrassment in calling for help, even in poolside experiments. If embarrassment is evident in such experimental situations how much more it must exist in a life-and-death situation. Learning how to call for help is an important drowning preventative and such training is being incorporated in regular Red Cross safety courses to help individuals call for help freely without embarrassment in every risky situation.

So... when in trouble in the water... USE YOUR VOICE... CALL FOR HELP and for a happy, carefree holiday in the coming Summer months take advantage of your Red Cross Safety Service to increase your safety knowledge and learn to recognize the potential dangers of water recreation. BE WATER WISE... IT'S PLAIN GOOD SENSE.

Learn How Easy It Is To Use The DIRECT METHOD OF ARTIFICIAL RESPIRATION.

1. If victim is not breathing begin artificial respiration at once. Wipe out quickly any foreign matter visible in the mouth, using your fingers or a cloth wrapped around your fingers.
2. Tilt the victim's head back. Pull or push the jaw into a jutting-out position. If the mouth (or jaw) will not open, seal the mouth and blow air into the victim's nose.
3. If victim is a small child place your mouth tightly over his mouth and nose and blow gently into his lungs about 20 times a minute. If victim is an adult cover the mouth with your mouth, pinch his nostrils shut and blow vigorously about 12 times a minute.

4. If unable to get air into lungs of victim, and if head and jaw positions are correct, suspect foreign matter in throat. To remove it, suspend a small child momentarily by the ankles or place child in a jack-knife position with arm under his stomach. Slap him sharply between shoulder blades.
5. If victim is an adult lie him on the ground in a jack-knife position and slap him sharply between the shoulder blades.

Water Safety

After a meal, wait two hours before swimming—a sensible precaution against cramps. Swim parallel to the shore, so that you can always see it—this way, you're never too far from safety.

Never swim alone and preferably only where there are life-guards or people trained in life-saving.

Enter strange water feet first. Condition your body to the water by splashing your ankles, wrists, neck and chest.

Parents—always supervise the children in or near water. Even that backyard plastic pool should be emptied when not supervised.

Boating Safety

A boat pulling a skier must have a crew of two—one to drive, one to watch the skier.

Always remain seated in a small boat or canoe.

When using a row-boat to rescue a swimmer in trouble, bring him aboard over the stern. In a canoe, lift him in over the side in the mid-section.

Never overload your boat. Make sure everyone in it wears an approved life jacket.

If your boat overturns, remain with it. Hold onto the gunwales and wait for help.

Wrought Iron Offers Variety

Wrought iron is a product that should be considered when re-modelling home interiors or exteriors.

Wrought iron design not only adds a sturdy, yet delicate note, but the decorative iron rails and trillies are adaptable to most any period or style of home. They also often accent the design and furnishings.

Many Patterns

The patterns range from crisp straight-line designs, to ornate gingerbread varieties and are limited only by imagination—and pocketbook.

Actually the term "wrought iron" is misleading, as "hot rolled mild steel" is the material generally used.

Wrought iron technically, is a commercial iron containing very little carbon and usually fibrous. Economically it is not practical in normal house decorating.

But wrought iron is the term the average person uses, the common term for forged, shaped, twisted and hammered ornamental iron which is functional as well as decorative.

Your dealer will know that term and know what it is you want.

Little Upkeep

Advantages of decorative iron for railings or porch trellises are obvious.

In addition to its adaptability to design it is virtually permanent, requires little upkeep and is strong without being bulky.

If railings or grillwork are for indoors you should consider polished brass accessories.

Outdoor installations should have a primer coat of red lead, zinc chromate or some other metal-base paint to resist rusting, following by at least two coats of good outdoor enamel.

Colors for indoor use are unlimited, but darker hues ordinarily mean less frequent painting.

First Gov. Pocketbook To Be Introduced

OTTAWA, Ont. — Businessmen attending the Second Export Trade Promotion Conference in Ottawa from April 16 to May 3 will receive copies of the first pocketbook ever published by the Canadian Government.

Issued simultaneously in English and French editions, "How To Run a Business" will be sold on news-stands from coast to coast at 50c a copy.

Compiled by the Industrial Promotion Branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce, it is based on years of research into the successes and failures of thousands of Canadian enterprises.

An authoritative hand-book of sound business practices "How To Run a Business" covers all types of business and forms of organization, and deals with such vital subjects as laws and regulations, records and accounts, insurance, location and uses and sources of credit.

In presenting the first copy off the press to James A. Roberts, Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce, C. A. St. Arnaud, Superintendent of the Publications Branch of the Department of Public Printing and Stationery, said that "How To Run a Business" is the first of a series of pocketbooks on a wide range of subjects to be published by the Queen's Printer.

Foresight saves ills in plumbing

Proper care of plumbing equipment in a home, before anything goes wrong, is just as important as cleaning and lubricating a car, painting a house every few years or waxing furniture.

It all comes under the idea of preventive maintenance according to a heating information concern in Chicago.

Fix leaky faucets immediately to avoid later damage to parts; don't pour lye down a food waste disposer as it corrodes the metal, prolong the life of a water heater by draining a few quarts of water from the tank bottom every few weeks; when repairing fixtures, pad the wrench to prevent marring a brass finish.

Also don't pour excessive quantities of boiling water down a water closet drain; tag or identify all valves so that in an emergency the water can be shut off; get professional repair service if plumbing problem is of a major nature.

The bureau argued that such a program is a worthwhile effort, since roughly 10 per cent of one's investment in a house is in the fixtures.

MOUTH TO MOUTH RESCUE BREATHING

... the approved easy method of artificial respiration

If victim is not breathing due to drowning, suffocation or electrocution, begin artificial respiration at once. Wipe out any foreign matter visible in the mouth, using your fingers or a cloth wrapped around your fingers.

Tilt victim's head back. Pull or push the jaw into a jutting-out position, thus creating direct air passage to the lungs. If the mouth (or jaw) will not open, seal the mouth and blow air into the victim's nose.

Open the victim's mouth, cover his mouth with your mouth, pinch his nostrils shut, and blow vigorously about 12 times a minute. If victim is a small child, place your mouth tightly over his mouth and nose and blow gently into his lungs about 20 times a minute.

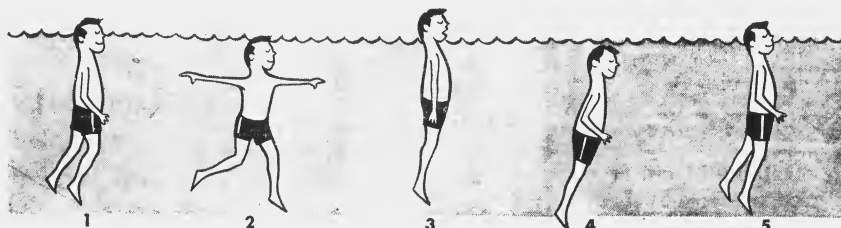

If victim's chest does not rise, there may be foreign matter in his throat. If a small child, suspend him by the ankles or place the child in a jack-knife position with your arm under his stomach. Slap him sharply between the shoulder blades. Continue rescue breathing (mouth to mouth resuscitation.)

If victim is an adult lie him on the ground in a jack-knife position and slap him sharply between the shoulder blades. Continue with rescue breathing until help arrives.

Practice this method of ...

EASY-TO-LEARN SURVIVAL FLOATING

Here is a proven method of staying afloat when in difficulty. It is easy to learn and takes advantage of your body's natural buoyancy to keep you afloat for hours. Practice these step-by-step instructions - they can save your life!

1. Take a deep breath and float vertically, chin forward close to chest. Relax completely and you will find you can hold your breath comfortably from 5 to 10 seconds. The back of your head will break the surface of the water.

2. Prepare for slow downward push by raising the arms to shoulder level, palms down, one leg extended forward the other backward. Begin exhaling through the mouth. Lift face gently out of water as you continue exhaling.

3. Eyes open, inhale through mouth as you push slowly downward with both hands. Do not waste energy by trying to raise shoulders above water.

4. When lungs are full, slide under water. As your head sinks under water continue slow downward movement of arms and/or legs to prevent sinking too deeply.

5. Now you are back at the Number 1 position. Practice will enable you to continue the cycle for hours.

OF MANY THINGS by Ambrose Hills

Should We Sell Wheat To China?

Any person who discusses public affairs and forms opinions must be prepared to make some tough moral decisions. And he can never be sure that he is 100 per cent right. I have chewed on this wheat-to-China problem a good deal, and it makes tough chewing.

If I had to answer categorically, I would answer that I am in favor of selling wheat to China. I believe that country is suffering from a very real famine. If other countries refuse to sell her wheat, she may, in desperation, attempt to take it by force. If she did not resort to force, there would be more starvation.

No doubt China brought this problem on herself. She is now undertaking a back to the earth program and re-establishing a limited form of private, market-garden farming. But it is late in the day. It will be some time before she can feed her 670 million population. To deny grain to the Chinese people because their government blundered would not make moral sense.

I also realize that China launched an unprovoked war against India. But again, this is an act of the Chinese government, and not of the people themselves. If she persists, and India is in dire danger, then I presume we would stop our shipments of grain. However, I don't think our wheat shipments are doing much more than ease the hunger of the people; I doubt that we are giving China the strength to wage its war on India.

Certainly there are other sides to this argument. The market in China is at best a temporary one. The Chinese government, once it is over the famine crisis, will use trade as a weapon against us. She will insist that we buy many products from her that we used to buy from Japan - a country much more likely to be a long-term customer for our production.

So it becomes one of those problems where the answer appears to be: proceed, but with caution. Don't give trade concessions or credit arrangements that ought to be saved for customers more likely to be with us ten or fifteen years from now.

Plante - Dziedzic Nuptials Solemnized

The United Church in Blairmore was the setting for an early afternoon wedding April 27th, when vows were exchanged between Lorraine Cecile Dziedzic, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dziedzic of Blairmore, and Thomas Gordon Plante, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Plante, sr., of Coleman. The Rev. Kas Iwassa of Blairmore, officiated at the ceremonies.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, and looked radiant in a floor-length gown of nylon organza over taffeta net with lace lily-point sleeves and a sequin- and pearl-trimmed neckline. Her four-tiered scalloped nylon fingertip veil fell from a crown of sequins and crystal drops. She carried a bouquet of Easter lilies and red roses which were embedded in the centre of the lilies.

Maid of honor was Carole Plante who chose a pink cocktail frock of nylon and net and her head-piece of nylon with a large rose centered on top in matching color.

Darlene Dziedzic, sister of the bride, as junior bridesmaid, was dressed in blue nylon and lace with matching head-piece similar in design to the maid of honor.

Both attendants carried nosegays of carnations.

Robert Plante, eldest brother of the groom, was best man, while ushers were Laddie Poch and John Kostyniuk, uncles of the bride.

A reception was held in the Elks hall in Blairmore, where over 150 guests attended to honor the happy young couple. Master of ceremonies was John Kostyniuk, who called on Robert Plante to propose the toast to the bride to which the groom responded.

A three-tiered wedding cake centered the bride's table, which was gaily decorated with yellow, pink and white flowers.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Dziedzic chose a white and beige sheath with tangerine accessories and corsage. Mrs. Plante wore a sheath with white accessories and corsage.

The happy young couple have taken up residence in Coleman where the groom is employed.

Out of town guests were present at the affair from Vancouver and Creston, B. C.; Calgary, Okotoks, Lethbridge and the Pass towns.
